

BROWN IN A BAD FIX WITH HIS NEW SUIT

Between Chum, Tailor and Hotels He Manages to Land in Tombs Cell.

There came into the West Side Court as a prisoner to-day a tall, handsome man dressed in a brand-new tailor-made suit and a hat of the latest brio.

He was Newton L. Brown, thirty-seven years old, calling himself a dealer in mining securities and said to be the son of a noted Philadelphia lawyer who died in a madhouse five years ago.

Lately Brown had been sharing a suite of rooms at the New Gotham, a big apartment-house at No. 242 West Forty-ninth street, with Leroy R. Whitlock, twenty-three years old, an agent for the New England Copper Company.

Whitlock said that two nights ago Brown asked him for the loan of some money. He went into the next room to get the cash and when he came back a diamond ring worth $150 was missing from a dresser.

Found Pawn Ticket. At Whitlock's complaint Detective Troy arrested Brown. Troy found in Brown's pockets a pawn ticket for the ring. Having recovered his property, Whitlock said he had no desire to push a charge of larceny against his former chum. Magistrate Cornell was about to dismiss the case when there rose in the body of the court room a small man very much excited.

"Don't let him go, Your Honor!" he shouted. "I've been looking for him everywhere. My name is M. Brandt, and I keep a tailoring establishment at No. 1 Madison avenue. This man Brown got me to make a suit for him for $30. He came to my place, put on the suit and paid me with a check for $50. I wanted him to give him $20 in change, but I was too smart for that. I told him I would cash the check first. But the bank sent it back. I've been trying to locate Brown ever since. And say, Your Honor, that's the very suit he's wearing now. I want $30 or I want my suit."

Beating Hotels, Too. Brown didn't have a word to say at this, but he didn't look happy. Magistrate Cornell made him wait while Brandt swore out a warrant. But Brown had friends in court and they were about to settle the matter with the tailor for cash when Detective Troy took a hand again. He told the Magistrate he had proof that Brown was a confirmed hotel thief.

"With bogus checks," said Troy, "he has victimized the Fifth Avenue, the Marlborough, the Bartholdi and the Gerard out of board bills ranging from $10 down to $100."

So when Brandt came back, satisfied in purse and ready to drop his charge, the Magistrate wouldn't hear it. He said Brown wasn't a hotel thief, but he was a big one and held him in bonds of $1,000.

Newton L. Brown and his spring suit are in a cell together at the tombs.

The New York Athletic Club will not enlarge its present clubhouse by the purchase of the Coronet apartment, at Fifty-eighth street and Sixth avenue. The proposition was voted down at a meeting held last night.

John R. Van Wormer, president of the club, pointed out, on the one hand, that the club could make a profit of $25,000 a year above expenses by the purchase of the entire Coronet building.

FOUND DYING BETWEEN TRACKS OF RAILROAD. Unidentified Man, Evidently an Employee of Road Had Been Struck by Train.

With both legs and his jaw fractured and suffering from internal injuries, an unidentified man was found unconscious between the New York Central tracks near Two Hundred and Thirty-ninth street to-day. The man appeared to be about twenty years old and wore blue overalls over a dark suit of clothing.

There were no papers or cards in the man's pockets to lead to his identity, but tattooed on his right arm were the initials "R. E."

The man was taken to Fordham Hospital. There is little chance that he will recover.

SLEW GANG CHIEF IN SELF-DEFENSE. Watchman Lejewski, Who Killed James McClane After Beating, Is Set Free.

Vincent Lejewski, watchman of a stone scow, who was arrested on the night of April 21 at the foot of Clinton avenue, Brooklyn, charged with the murder of James McClane, the leader of a "gang" was to-day released from custody when the Grand Jury refused to indict him on the ground that he killed McClane in self-defense.

The evidence showed Lejewski was attacked and badly beaten by McClane's gang, and that it was only when he believed his life in danger that he fired on McClane, killing him.

NEWS-STAND MADE POLITICAL SPOIL

Halprin's License Revoked at Request of Hearst Alderman—Carries Fight to Court.

"We used to think that Tammany Hall was bad," said A. Holman-Ross, president of the National Association of Newsdealers and editor of the Newsdealer, to-day, "and we hailed Hearst as a Moses for the common people. But here is the Hearst Alderman, Harry L. Leverett, who turns out the poor fellow who has kept the newsstand under the L' station at Eighty-fourth street and Third avenue for eleven years, in order to give it to another man."

"The New York Protective and Benevolent Newsdealers' Association has taken the matter up and we will fight it through to the Court of Appeals."

While Mr. Holman-Ross was talking, Michael H. Harris was arguing before Justice Blachoff in the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining the Bureau of Licenses from revoking a license running to next March, issued to Louis Halprin, and restraining the Bureau of Incumbrances from tearing down and removing the newsstand.

Halprin, son of Alderman John T. McCall, of the Thirtieth, to approve his application for the eleventh renewal of his license and secured the permit by paying the $10 fee prescribed by law. Then Alderman Leverett, of the Thirtieth, second, a Hearst man, objected, saying the stand is in his district and had the license revoked and a new one issued to Leverett, friend of Edward J. McGovern.

Halprin says in an affidavit that he paid $50 for the stand and good will of the former owner in 1896, and for eleven years has worked night and day and has increased the value of the stand to $2,000.

"It is all I have in the world," says Halprin, and is compelled to move. "Here is one of the much-commiserated common people starting in the face because his newsstand is wanted by an Alderman for his friend," said Harris. "We contend that the Alderman of the district must be consulted on the granting of a new license, each license is entitled to a renewal provided his character and conduct are good. In this case there was a renewal, which was revoked arbitrarily, capriciously and without cause."

This, we contend, is illegal. "This is a license for the twelfth year to Halprin was paid March 14, and he paid his $10 fee. On April 17, the Alderman told him his license had been revoked and demanded the name under penalty of arrest. So Halprin gave up the license for which he had just paid $10. A day or two later he was ordered to get out of the Bureau of Incumbrances and take away his stand. Halprin says the Bureau for which he had paid $50 and which he had labored eleven years to increase, going from him and brought suit in self-preservation. We ask for an injunction which will restrain the Bureau of Licenses from issuing a license which might be revoked at will."

Decision was reserved.

CHANCE FOR LIFE OF CARL SCHURZ

Physician of Distinguished Publicist in Latest Bulletin Gives Hope.

Carl Schurz, the veteran editor and publicist, is critically ill at his home, No. 24 East Ninety-third street. For three days he was thought to be at the point of death, but after a rally during the night his friend and physician, Dr. A. Jacoby, who has been constantly at his bedside, was able to issue an encouraging bulletin to-day.

The physician's statement follows: "Mr. Schurz has been quite sick these last few days. His pulmonary oedema is now relieved. He is in no immediate danger. Indeed, much improved and favorable prognosis. A. JACOBI, M. D., May 11, 7:45 A. M."

Though suffering from a complication of stomach troubles, Mr. Schurz, who is seventy-six years old, was keenly engrossed in intellectual affairs up to a week ago, when he was taken seriously ill. He was to have presided Wednesday night at the annual dinner in the Hotel Cecil of the Civil Service Reform Association, of which he was founder and president.

HIRED DEATH ROOM IN BOWERY HOUSE. Aged Man Shot Himself Soon After Registering as "John Morse" in Puritan.

After signing himself "John Morse, Boston," a man who, it is believed, was attempting to conceal his identity, shot himself to death in the Puritan Lodging House, No. 105 Bowery, early to-day.

The man, who appeared to be about fifty-five years old, went to the lodging-house late last night and paid for a room. He was assigned to 26, on the third floor. He was smooth shaven and bald, his clothes were black and clean and he did not look like the usual Bowery lodging-house habitue.

Scores of men were asleep in the lodging-house when the report of the revolver awakened them. The police found a revolver slung in the man's hand. He had sent a bullet through his brain and death was instantaneous. The body was taken to the Morgue.

WORKMAN FOUND DROWNED. Body Picked Up in the Bay at Stapleton-Long in Water.

The body of a man was washed ashore at the foot of Cliff street, at Stapleton, S. I., adjoining the Quarantine boarding station, to-day. It had been in the water so long that the features were unrecognizable. The man was five feet six inches in height and weighed about 145 pounds.

He had three gold teeth in the upper jaw, two on the right side and one on the left. He was dressed in a black coat, blue-striped shirt, overalls, gray cotton underwear and black socks. His sleeves were rolled up.

GOULD LOSES IN TENNIS DOUBLES

LONDON, May 11.—Young Jay Gould, of Lakewood, N. J., says he will return to England next year and make another trial for the international tennis championship. Experts who saw the boy play believe another year will develop him into a world-beater.

Gould's career in the international court tennis championship was cut short when he lost the first doubles match in which he played at the Queen's Club. His partner was Joshua Crane, and the pair lost to Andre and Forrester, a brace of Englishmen who are expected to carry off the doubles championship.

Gould and Crane had had only a limited amount of practice together and this has been held by many to account for their defeat. Besides, Gould had not entirely recovered from his disappointment at the loss of the singles championship, and as a result did not play with the confidence he had shown in his earlier matches.

The young millionaire was the stronger of the two American players. His famous "railroad" service fooled the Englishmen continually, but he was not supported strongly by Crane. Gould returned most of the service sent him by the Britons, and a majority of the matches were failed against his partner.

The proposed tennis tournament between American and British experts has been abandoned. The first game was arranged for to-day, but Eustace Miles telegraphed that business prevented his playing and the proposal to substitute Maj. Cooper-Key was not approved by the Americans, who refused to proceed with the matches unless the British champion participated.

As many spectators had gathered at the Queen's Club, an exhibition four some was arranged which resulted in Jay Gould, of Lakewood, N. J., and Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, Mass., defeating Maj. Cooper-Key and V. Pennell by 3-0. The sets were 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

had not entirely recovered from his disappointment at the loss of the singles championship, and as a result did not play with the confidence he had shown in his earlier matches.

The young millionaire was the stronger of the two American players. His famous "railroad" service fooled the Englishmen continually, but he was not supported strongly by Crane. Gould returned most of the service sent him by the Britons, and a majority of the matches were failed against his partner.

The proposed tennis tournament between American and British experts has been abandoned. The first game was arranged for to-day, but Eustace Miles telegraphed that business prevented his playing and the proposal to substitute Maj. Cooper-Key was not approved by the Americans, who refused to proceed with the matches unless the British champion participated.

As many spectators had gathered at the Queen's Club, an exhibition four some was arranged which resulted in Jay Gould, of Lakewood, N. J., and Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, Mass., defeating Maj. Cooper-Key and V. Pennell by 3-0. The sets were 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

had not entirely recovered from his disappointment at the loss of the singles championship, and as a result did not play with the confidence he had shown in his earlier matches.

The young millionaire was the stronger of the two American players. His famous "railroad" service fooled the Englishmen continually, but he was not supported strongly by Crane. Gould returned most of the service sent him by the Britons, and a majority of the matches were failed against his partner.

The proposed tennis tournament between American and British experts has been abandoned. The first game was arranged for to-day, but Eustace Miles telegraphed that business prevented his playing and the proposal to substitute Maj. Cooper-Key was not approved by the Americans, who refused to proceed with the matches unless the British champion participated.

As many spectators had gathered at the Queen's Club, an exhibition four some was arranged which resulted in Jay Gould, of Lakewood, N. J., and Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, Mass., defeating Maj. Cooper-Key and V. Pennell by 3-0. The sets were 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him.

When shown the axe with which the old couple was murdered, Tedesco shrugged his shoulders and declared he had never seen it before.

TEDESCO HELD FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Evidence Points to Bootblack as Slayer of Muccio and Wife.

As a result of the investigations of his detectives, Capt. M. Canley, of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, to-day asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, to hold without bail Alphonse Tedesco, a bootblack, charged with the murder and robbery of Vincenzo Muccio and his aged wife at No. 6-4, 7-5.

6-4 Court street early yesterday. The Magistrate held the man. After Tedesco's arrest the detectives found that the clothes he wore were new. From the label they traced the purchase to a Park Row store. Inquiry there revealed the fact that the accused man had visited the store early yesterday and bought the suit, leaving his old garments behind. On examination the discarded garments were found to be damp, as though they had been recently washed.

The detectives asked the proprietor if he could produce the twenty-dollar bill he said Tedesco had paid for the new suit. When the note was produced from the safe it was found to be blood-stained. The police gave the storekeeper a new bill and took possession of the one he said Tedesco had tendered him